Words and Photos by Joel Browning

Another year passed and we now have another LA Auto Show preview under our belt. This year the PCA had the great pleasure of seeing the World Premier of the new Porsche 911 (aka Type 992). The Type 992 introduces a new interior following the trend set by the new Panamera and Cayenne also recently introduced. The squared off hood and the heckblende tail lights are some of the more prominent exterior design features and even the possible hybridization was being socialized during the presentations so that the purists have a chance to digest the news before it happens. However you feel about it, the new Type 992 pushes the 911 further along the performance envelope and provides a more advanced platform for new features.

On display was also the new 911 GT2 RS Clubsport. The rest of the display was once again filled with a delightful array of two and four door Porsches with a good selection of different colors, red of course being the only correct one! And the rest of the show had something for everyone. 🏎️
